NOBBY GETS A NEW SET OF WHEELS

1. What a rumpus in Toytown! Nobby's little yellow car was roaming the streets without a driver! Everyone ran to get out of the way.

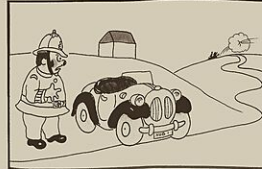

2. "What's going on?" asked P.C. Pop. "I'm looking for Nobby!" hooted the car. "He hasn't taken me out of the garage for weeks!"

3. Suddenly, the yellow car spun around as a strange figure roared past at great speed. It was Nobby on a big, fast motorcycle!

4. He pulled up outside the house of Bibi, the fashionable doll who'd moved into Toytown recently. "Let's split and find some fun, baby!" said Nobby.

5. The yellow car honked sadly. "You can't blame him for wanting to act grown-up," said P.C. Pop. "After all, he is about forty years old!"

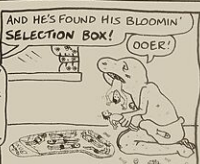

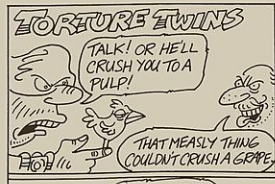

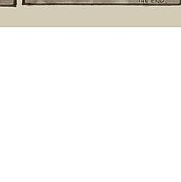

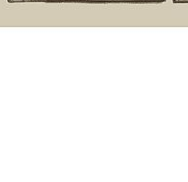

6. But their ride wasn't enjoyable! Nobby had to keep stopping to wind up the bike! "That's the last time I buy from the Toytown garage!" sighed Nobby.

MORAL: WHEN YOU'RE GROWING UP, THINGS NEVER GO LIKE CLOCKWORK!

Inspired by the great Soviet songwriters Lenin and McCartney, and in the new spirit of glasnost, perestroika and the fun-loving dictatorship of the proletariat, the Soviet leader broadcasts to the world his plea for the reform of corrupt elements of government and an end to big biccies and fresh cabbage for backsliding bureaucratic administrators.

- OR -

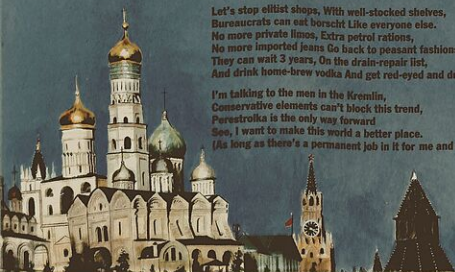

"The Men in the Kremlin" by Mikhail Jacksonov

I'm starting with the men in the Kremlin,
I'm asking them to change their ways,
I'm asking them to give up corruption,
If they want to make the world a better place,
Take a look at themselves and make a change.

Let's stop elitist shops, With well-stocked shelves,
Bureaucrats can eat borscht Like everyone else.
No more private limos, Extra petrol rations,
No more imported jeans Go back to peasant fashions.
They can wait 3 years, On the drain-repair list,
And drink home-brew vodka And get red-eyed and drunk.

I'm talking to the men in the Kremlin,
Conservative elements can't block this trend,
Perestroika is the only way forward
See, I want to make this world a better place.
(As long as there's a permanent job in it for me and my friends).

The Ballad of ROBBERING HOOD

In Merrie Olde England, the folks were dismayed,
For Richard the King had gone off on a Crusade.
He'd left his crust brother in charge of the land,
And John was a tyrant who ruled with cruel hand.

But one man stood up to the wicked King.
And of his deeds we now shall sing.
'Twas Robbing Hood, a merry crook,
From lords and ladies their jewels he took.

And also their pants, dresses and vests,
The hats from their heads and the shirts from their chests.
He took from the rich to give to the poor
Who lived in the forest and up on the moor.

For years he'd pursued his robbing career,
But now he was old and his ending drew near.
Maid Marian put his bow in his hand,
Said Rob: 'Bury me where this arrow doth land'.

But the arrow flew high, and in falling it stayed
Noble King Richard (just back from a Crusade).

King John heard the news as he dined in his hall,
And said: 'That old Hood ain't so bad after all'.

Old Robbing backed up, and felt a lot better.
When a messenger came to him bearing a letter.
The letter from John offered Robbing a job,
With plenty of opportunities to steal and to rob.

Now Rob's not an outlaw, and he can relax.
He's taken a job helping John collect tax.
It gives him security, comfort and wealth,
As he robs from the poor to give to himself.

Katie Boonle's PRESENT TIPS FOR THE DAY AFTER

WHAT TO DO IN THE EVENT OF AN ALL-OUT NUCLEAR WAR

● CANCEL THE MILK AND NEWSPAPER DELIVERIES

It really isn't fair on poor old Milkie if he has to deliver to ALL the houses the morning after the holocaust. One less on his list is something he's bound to appreciate.

● LOCK ALL DOORS AND WINDOWS

We don't want people just wandering in and seeing the curtains in such a dreadful state, do we?

● PAINT ALL THE WINDOWS WHITE TO DEFLECT HEAT

There is an awful lot of heat generated by a nuclear explosion, so it's a good idea to cover up your petunias and daffodils, too — or they might get a bit shrivelled!

● CONSTRUCT A FALL-OUT SHELTER AS SHOWN HERE:

1. Remove 3 inner doors and lean them against a convenient wall. (Don't forget to sand down the edges, or you may tear the wall paper).
2. Place several cushions against the doors, and paint the doors white.

NB: It is best not to use glass-panelled doors, as they tend to smash or melt and kill you.

Your local Oxfam shop may have some old cushions — why not help charity as you protect yourself?

3. Personalise the shelter. Why not add a little window box and some curtains?

DAVID SMELLAMY'S WORLD OF NATURE

This month: "Masters of Disguise"

Creetings, nature-lovers! Did you know that many cweatures throughout the world have perfected the awt of camouflage to an incredible degree? I pwesent, on this page, a wound-up of some of these wonders of the natuwal world...

1] Here we see the twee-dwelling CHAMELEON, which has cleverly disguised itself as a wubber lizard in owder to avoid small boys twying to pull its legs off.

4] Even the humble Bwtish COMMON OR GARDEN HOUSE-MOUSE has adapted to the need for camouflage. Here we see it mimicking a tin of baked beans in order to wemain undetected as it raids a pantwy.

2] The TWANSLUCENT TWOPICAL TIDDLERFISH can turn its flesh totawwy twansparent, to fool predators into thinking they've eaten it already.

5] Here, the BOLIVIAN GIANT LEECH disguises itself as Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II in order to get into a Royal Vawwety Pewformance featuring Des O'Connor (a gweat favourite among music-loving Bolivian Leeches). Another intewesting fact about the species is that they are all totawwy tone-deaf.

3] The PEWLVIAN TWIT-SPAWWOW has the wemarkable ability to imitate its wivals for the mastwewy of the air. Here it is cunningly disguised as Lithuanian Airways flight BC104 fwom Heathwov.

6] Here we see a pathetic attempt at disguise by PIGGUS WIDICULOUS (David Smellamy, to give him his non-scientific name). This failed attempt to escape the wrath of a predator [me] happened after Smellamy turned in a set of stupid photos, claiming they were an educational natural history feature. Smellamy's disguise abilities are improving — in fact, after I got my trotters on him, he was unrecognisable!
